The Vaudeville at the Grand.

The vaudeville bill at the Grand this week contains an abundance of pleasing features and will repay a visit to that popular amusement house. The attraction that is down on the bills as the "headliner" of the show is Charles Prelle's "talking dogs," but there are a number of other specialties that are every bit as entertaining and meritorious. The act presented by Mr. Prelle and his animals proves a surprise; it is not a wonderful exhibition of trained dogs, as one had been led to suppose it would be from the advertisements of the performance, but in reality a clever ventrioquial specialty on Mr. Prelle's part, with his canines merely acting as his assistants. The idea is a new one and is well worked out. The dogs wear clothes and masks that give them the appearance of dwarfed human beings and their master carries on a conversation with them just as the regular ventriloquist gives his pretended dialogues with wooden figures. The disguised animals seem to be actually talking, as the lips of their masks move in a life-like manner. Just how Mr. Prelle manages this feature of his act is something of a mystery. So far as the dogs comical costumes and masks in a way that aids in carrying out the delusion, but do The noteworthy entertainers on the bill. ho present good single specialties, are seen and heard at the Grand several times before and is a favorite here. He comes again with a characteristically absurd that is particularly new his "line of talk" laughter during his fifteen minutes on the negro songs who can refrain from exaggeration of negro character and still make her interpretations and imitations exceedingly umorous. Each song is a little comedy all in itself when Clarice Vance sings it. She is an artist in her line. Much interest was evinced yesterday in the new specialty of La Carmontella, as wife of Louis W. Buckley, of the Grand's business staff. The act is called "The Witch of the Moon," and it is a decided novelty. The stage is given a "black art" setting and, in the make-up of a wicked old witch, the little performer comes gliding down to terra firma seated on a broomstick "after brushing the cobwebs from the When she arrives on the earth, she is transformed into a very pretty, very dainty and very graceful little athlete and gymnast, and proceeds to give an exhibition which ranks with the very best of its class now before the public. Carmontella, as she figure are such as to cause her to appear even younger. She had many well-wishers in yesetrday's audiences, but the applause which greeted her stage work was not the plaudits of over-enthusiastic friends so much as it was the spontaneous demonstrations of approval from disinterested spec-Heavy varnished gold Papers in rich | tators. That "The Witch of the Moon" will prove a popular act in vaudeville this season-especially after its mechanical de-

> of perfection-there can be no doubt. The Eleury Trio of French dancers give a terpsichorean act that is far more interesting than the similar specialty of the much advertised Armenis-Tito troupe, which was at the Grand last week. The they go through their work with a dash that rouses the audience to enthusiasm. McIntyre and Primrose are the names of two young men who form a new black-face good results. The young comedians are funny in their dialogue, but they have a poor finish to their act, using an old parody that has been sung for several seasons in the burlesque houses and which is altogether out of place in a high-class vaudeville theater. With a suitable conclusion to their turn, the new team should be in demand among managers. Carl W. Sanderones and bad ones. This one of the bad ones. However, the two farceurs manage to get some fun out of the poor material furnished them, and Miss Leonard's songs in German and French please the audience. The bioscope has several interesting moving views, including some excellent pictures taken in Norway.

Melodrama at the Park.

Hal Reid is the Clyde Fitch of populartheatrical circuits. He turns out from three to a half-dozen melodramas each season, seemingly, and his "works" are always in demand among the managers of this class of amusement. "Driven from Home" is one of Reid's latest plays, and Manager W. D. Fitzgerald, who owns it, has so much faith in its drawing powers that he is staging it in a very attractive manner and sparing no expense in giving it every possible advantage. This new one of Reid's is now at the Park for a half-week's engagement, and the two performances yesterday were attended by large and enthusiastic audiences.

"Driven from Home," like the majority of Reid's plays, is delightfully inconsistent and cheerfully crude. It has for its principal characters a narrow-minded farmer (borrowed from "Way Down East") a misunderstood daughter (borrowed from "Hazel Kirke"), a city man, who is of course a contemptible villain (all city men are in plays having rural scenes), a selfimportant constable with whom theatergoers have become acquainted in many other plays, a fond, white-haired mother, a manly lover, a crippled boy and a selfcentered lady in a flaming red dress. But if Mr. Reid looks to other successful plays rather than to real life for his characters and his stage-stories, he possesses the facility of inventing situations that prove highly exciting to the class of people to whom he caters, and his "Driven from Home" was voted a "rattling good play" down at the Park yesterday afternoon and

The leading role-that of Margie Maynard, the misunderstood daughter-is taken by the young woman who, from her childhood's days has been known to the public by the stage name of Patrice. At first a clever juvenile performer and later on a vivacious soubrette, Patrice has now become an emotional actress of no mean ability. She deserves credit for her originality, for she does not pattern her acting after the usual style of melodramatic heroines, but adopts methods that are all her own and which are very effective, to judge from the alternate laughter and tears she succeeded in drawing from her audiences yesterday. The company seems to enjoy acting the play as much as the Park crowds enjoy watching its presentation. Walter Wilson is good as the stern, unrelenting father, and Charles Hutchinson makes a handsome and manly lover out of the young farmer, Tom Anderson, Hal Clarendon, as the city man, Hamilton Van Cruger, is a very villainous villain and stirs up several virtuous spasms of hisses from indignant spectators in the auditorium while carrying ut his dastardly schemes. Charles Gibson, an uncommonly good-looking young chap, overacts the part of the crippled brother of the heroine to a painful extent, even in the quieter moments of the piece, and Miss Marie Heger, as the lady in red, is very artificial. Thomas Norton, as the foolish constable, and Arthur J. Coleman and Lottie Hyde, as a country bumpkin and his girl, make the most of the silly lines given to them, while Miss Helen Jones furnishes a good portrayal of the fond mother of the misjudged heroine. "Driven from Home" will continue at the Park through to-day and to-morrow and will doubtless do good business. It will be followed Thursday by "The Man Who

Burlesque at the Empire. The olio is the strongest part of the performance given at the Empire this week by Harry Bryant's Burlesquers. Darmody, who juggles Indian clubs and a gun, opens, and his work is meritorious in every feature. The only thing that mars his turn, in fact, is his make-up. He dons the costume and mannerisms of a "rube," while a clean-cut. clever act like his should be dignified and free from burlesque features. Casmore and Florence, German dialect comedians, were rewarded liberally with laughter and applause, and that is the mark of success at the Empire. The Racketts offer a turn that combines musical, dancing and athletic stunts, all of which are good. Matt Kennedy and Al Cameron, singing comedians, make good with the gallery from the first, Kennedy's burlesque of a "tentwent-thirt" melodrama being especially effective. Cameron has a good tenor voice. but was evidently suffering from a cold yesterday. The olio closes with the Imperial Japanese troupe of athletes, composed of three men and three boys, and their work is the feature of the whole show. The Japs are marvels of strength and skill and must be seen to be appreciated. They close their number with a "slide for life" on a rope stretched from the stage to the balcony. The burlesques offered have few redeeming features. The opening one is devoid of rhyme, reason or humor. The closing one is a slight improvement. Bryant himself appears in it, in his familiar hobo role, and contrives to get some fun out of his part. Fanny Everett, a familiar figure in the burlesque world, heads the chorus in both burlesques. The chorus is well drilled and attractively costumed. Vaudeville at the Unique.

The little Unique Theater offered an entertaining vaudeville bill to good-sized audiences yesterday afternoon and last night. Winsome Grace Morrison has been re-engaged by Manager Ralph Thorbus and heads the programme. Miss Morrison will go on the Castle vaudeville circuit after themselves are concerned they wear their this week and this fact in itself speaks well for her ability. The popular comedian, Tim Murphy, will give one performance at English's this evening of his new comedy, "The Man the little contortionist is in private life the from Missouri," a play that was especially written for him by George V. Hobart and Edward E. Rose. Mr. Murphy appears as Jim Broncho, a Westerner, who aids a friend in getting into Congress and then goes to Washington to visit that friend. The scenes of the piece are all laid in Washington, and the story concerns the Westerner's movements in the society of the nation's capital. Mr. Murphy's supporting company is a large one and includes such well-known players as Dorothy Sherrod, Elliott Dexter, John P. Wade, Bernhardt Niemeyer, William L. Gibson, O. J. SONGS OF HINDOO WIDOW

THEY WERE A FEATURE OF PENTE-COST MISSIONARY SERVICE.

Glimpses of the Terrible Famine in India Given by the Rev. Frank C. Hotle.

One of the most interesting missionary services ever held in Indianapolis was given at the Pentecost Church, 223 North New Jersey street, last night. The Rev. Frank C. Hotle, superintendent of Pentecost Church work in Indiana, who is in the city for a short visit before returning to the Orient, conducted a farewell meeting. He was assisted by his wife and two children, Miss Iva I. Cauble, of Salem, Ind., Miss Bertha Fox, of Olina, Ont., the Rev. William McReady and Rhada, the Hindoo girl, who accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Hotle to this country.

Native costumes were worn by Rhada and the little Hotle girl, who sang several Hindoo chants. The Rev. Mr. Hotle gave an interesting account of his experiences as a missionary in India and told of the work that had been accomplished there by the Pentecost missions. Mr. Hotle's name is familiar throughout the country by reason photographs furnished by him during the terrible famine in India. He covered most of the stricken land during that period, supervising the relief work of the Pentecost band. The thirteen-year-old Hindo girl Rhada was most interesting. Her costume was unique and her songs were mysterious and enchanting. She is an Indian widow, When a mere baby she was betrothed and married by her parents to a husband many years her senior, who perished during the famine. She was found at the feet of an idol in one of the Oriental temples and was taken in charge by the Pentecost missionaries. She is extremely bright and the missionaries have found her a great aid in their work in that country.

The little band will leave soon for the East, visiting several cities on their way to New York, whence they will sail for Raj Nandgaon, Central province, in December, where Rev. Hotle has charge of three missionary stations. He has been in India for the past five years.

COMMISSIONER MOORES'S DECISION STIRS THEM UP.

Precedent Set in Lynchehaun Case May Work for Safety of American Criminals, London Papers Say.

The decision of United States Commissioner Charles W. Moores, releasing James L. Lynchehaun from custody on the ground that, while his crime was brutal, it was nevertheless political, received adverse comment generally in the afternoon papers of London. The Globe stated that politics influenced the decision, and said further: "The next assassin of a President will Commissioner McCormack yesterday. He plead Commissioner Moore's judgment with irresistible force if he escapes across the Canadian line. The Americans will have no cause for complaint if the result throws out of gear the whole machinery of extradition between the United States and Great Britain."

> The Pall Mall Gazette has the following to say: "By the same reasoning used by Commissioner Moores it would always be possible to refuse the extradition of Anarchists guilty of the most dastardly crimes." These criticisms were widely discussed in Indianapolis yesterday evening. Although there is general rejoicing among the Irishmen of the country over the decision of Commissioner Moores, the Lynchehaun trouble may not be ended yet. Other charges have been mentioned which may be brought against him, and it is known that Great Britain will not drop the case until every effort to get back the prisoner has failed. It is said that the charge of making false affidavits as to who he was in passing the emigration station is sufficient if he could be proven as an escaped criminal to deport him under the immigration laws. Another charge that could be brought against him is that he testified that his name was James Walsh when first arraigned in court here, and on that ground a perjury charge could be placed against him. In any case he has battles ahead to fight unless Great Britain decides to let the case drop, which is not probable.

"I am told the Pennsylvania the best years of his life it seems to me the right thing that the corporation should stick to him the remainder of his life and see that he is taken care of. Until I made a trip to Pennsylvania, a few weeks ago, I had always understood that Andrew Carnegie's pension system only applied to those men who had been employed by him in conducting his steel plants. While in Pennsylvania I heard of two widows in a certain town whose husbands were employed on the Pennsylvania Railroad while Mr. Carnegie was superintendent of the Pittsburg division. Every month these women receive $20 from Andrew Carnegie." Other topics to be discussed at the New York conference are "Insurance and Relief Associations," "Profit Sharing," "The Lunchroom" and "Rational Comforts in the Workroom."

Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the State Board of Health, was at his desk yesterday, after an absence in the East, where he attended the meeting of the American Public Health Association, held at Washington, Members of the health association met the officers of the hydrographic division of the geological survey and discussed the pollution of streams in Indiana. Dr. Hurty says it was pointed out that under the present laws of Indiana it is impossible to keep the streams free from the sewage of cities and towns. It was suggested that special laws would have to be passed before the pollution of streams either by industries or city sewage could be effectively stopped.
